The Lacquer Crop.

It is a popular notion that the valuable varnishes known as lacquers are vegetable products that exude from various trees of India and the East when their twigs are punctured by a cochineal insect.

One kind of gum is, however, actually produced by the insect itself. The minute larvae begin to secrete the gum as soon as they puncture the tender bark and begin to suck the plant juices. In favorable circumstances the red secretion gradually envelops the larva in a hard lump, which protects it from attack. Frequently, however, the larvae are so crowded that a mass of gum is formed, and then the unprotected larvae gradually die of starvation or exposure.

Experiments have shown that if the larvae were transferred at the proper season to bunches of straw fastened to twigs in favorable situations, the larvae would migrate to the tender branches under the best conditions. The discovery has greatly increased the production of lacquer in India.

Uncertain Humanity.

"Briefly stated," we explained, "the story of Enoch Arden was about as follows: He went to sea and was shipwrecked on an uninhabited island where he remained for several years. When at last he was rescued Mr. Arden put out for home with considerable rapidity, only to find that during his absence Mrs. Arden had married again. What do you suppose was his subsequent action?"

"Hard to figure!" replied Mr. Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, who had been listening with deep interest to the recital. "You can't tell which way a toad will jump when you poke him, and folks is just as peculiar. Prob'ly he either took a shot at his wife's second husband or else borrowed enough money off a him to get back to his uninhabited island, and I wouldn't bet a nickel on either horn of the what-d'ye-call it?"—Kansas City Star.

Not There.

"So your boy is entering college this fall. You're sending him to your own alma mater, I suppose?"

"Not on your life! There are too many traditions clustered about my name in the old place. I wouldn't care to have my boy try to imitate some of the stunts I did when I was a student."

The idea of a "tonic" for baldness that is chronic is manifestly quite absurd. But when your hair is falling in quantities appalling, there's hope in that reassuring word.

FINDING GOLD IN AUSTRALIA

How the Original Prospector Made the First Discovery of the Precious Metal.

For 30 years the memory of a piece of gold-studded ore haunted Richard Greaves, a famous West Australian prospector, who has died lately. It was in western Australia, where he arrived in 1885, that "Dick" Greaves allowed the gold fever to get into his veins.

For two years after his arrival he prospected, off and on, for gold before its existence was definitely known in the state. He brought $3,000 in cash to western Australia, and the greater part of that money was spent in prospecting work. It was a sample of stone, named "Beare's stone," that sent him on his wanderings.

He was shown the stone, among others, shortly after his arrival in the state, and he tested it, and thereupon decided to find Beare and locate the place where the stone could be obtained. He never found Beare, nor did he find any more of Beare's stone.

To find gold in any stone, however, Greaves and his companion, Ted Palm, went out on their lonely prospecting trips. Success was denied them on several expeditions, but in October, 1887, they were rewarded, for in that month they discovered the first gold.

The story of the great find is simple, and told in his own words, is as follows: "As water was getting scarce, and the country very dry, our work on that trip became a quest for water instead of gold. We got to a clay pan, but the water was thick and slimy. We had to set to and pull the dead kangaroos out.

"We had decided to leave the dray and take the horses and test the country round. It was the best bit of country we had seen for prospecting, and so we struck it. Ted Palm struck a flake of gold in the soil. To find where it came from was the next move. On October 22 I came upon the reef, and we took a lot of stone out with gold hanging to it." From that beginning the mining industry sprang into first-rate importance.

PATHETIC PLIGHT OF RATS

Rodents Sit in Circle Around Onions on Board Ship, Weeping—Sailors Also Affected.

A very fishy rat story has been going the rounds of the American press, although part of it is undoubtedly correct and can easily be verified. The story circles around the arrival in New York of the French steamship Ville du Havre, consigned from a Spanish port with a cargo of onions. Members of the crew on arrival declared that they had all been weeping since the voyage first commenced owing to the painful effects onions have on the eyes, many of them being forced to sleep on deck. The quartermaster of the vessel carries the tragedy to a still higher point and solemnly declares that on one occasion when he went down the forehold to get a coil of rope he perceived hundreds of rats sitting in a circle around the onion sacks, pathetically rubbing their beady-black eyes with their paws.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No gripping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

SAYS WILSON IS UNCERTAIN

Judge H. H. Meyers, a prominent member of the Arkansas bar and twice Republican candidate for governor of that state, spoke to a fair sized audience at the court house last night in the interest of the Republican campaign.

The speaker devoted his time largely to a discussion of the tariff and pronounced the difference between the two parties to be one purely of economics. It was merely a question of whether to sell in the best markets or to buy in the cheapest markets.

Judge Meyers, in an entertaining way, told a number of humorous stories and ended with a criticism of President Wilson and of his administration, no abuse, however, entering into his observations. President Wilson, he said, had declared that he was going to serve one term only as president and now he wants another. The president, he asserted, had changed his mind so often that the public does not know where to find him. As instances he cited among others President Wilson's attitude on the Mexican situation. First he said, he ran an embargo on shipment of munitions to Mexico and then he took it off. Then he recognized Villa and later changed to Carranza.

The speaker also commented on other acts of the administration.
